Raglan Project Exploration Update

Vancouver, British Columbia – Resolve Ventures Inc. (“Resolve”) is pleased to announce that Resolve has commenced a 2008 exploration program for nickel-copper-PGE sulphides on its property in the Raglan Belt, northern Quebec.

Resolve will be following up previous airborne geophysical results and geological information with a program of geological mapping, prospecting, rock geochemical sampling and geological evaluation of likely target areas across the property. In addition Resolve will be completing a program of remote sensing, carried out by SpecTIR (Nevada, USA) consisting of airborne hyperspectral survey combined with a SEBASS survey, high resolution colour photography and some LIDAR survey work over areas of interest to better define the geology and economic potential of the Resolve property.

Field crews mobilized to the area in early July and the airborne survey components have been flown during late July and August during periods of favourable weather.
